

Who's in charge of MetroWest

ORLANDO - Is Kevin Azzouz still the developer of the MetroWest Master Association?

A managing company for the association, Sentry Management Inc., sent out a notice to residents just before the July 4 holiday, calling for a special meeting to introduce the new developer, Carl Shakarian of Boca Raton.

After residents clamored for answers, the meeting was abruptly canceled, just 30 minutes before it was to be held at Sentry's Clermont office, about a 31 mile drive from MetroWest.

And so far residents of the 1,800-acre development and its collection of rambling west Orlando neighborhoods haven't received a clear answer.

No legal paperwork has been filed with the city.

Shakarian told the Orlando Sentinel that he would make a statement soon, but since hasn't returned any phone calls or e-mails in about two weeks.

Joe Arroyo, a manager at Sentry in its Clermont office, hasn't returned phone calls.

Azzouz also hasn't returned calls.

Officials at City Hall say as far as they're concerned, Azzouz is still in charge.
